

2 ASSAILANTS OF ALTOONA MAN HELD FOR COURT

After questioning the victim and the four prisoners held in connection with the beating and robbery of R. H. Miller, 45, Altoona, late Thursday evening on East Lincoln avenue, Borough Officer Glenn Guise and Private Joseph F. Bushey said that John J. Brezak, 28, Avoca, Pa., and John Henry Pitts, colored, 28, Philadelphia, had admitted assaulting and robbing Miller.

Questioning continued from 8 o'clock Friday morning until 5 o'clock in the evening. During that time the four defendants were fingerprinted and a sworn statement was taken from Brezak.

Brezak has signed a plea of guilty to charges of assault and battery and highway robbery before Justice of the Peace John C. Shearer. Pitts, who cannot read or write, entered an oral plea to counts of aggravated assault and battery and highway robbery before the same justice. Both have been committed to jail without bail for court.

2 Get 30-Day Terms

The two other men who were taken into custody with Brezak and Pitts about midnight Thursday at the Chambersburg bus terminal have been charged by Officer Guise before Justice of the Peace John H. Basehore with vagrancy and were sentenced to the county jail for 30 days each. They gave their names as Joseph Korey, 25, Oakland, California, and William Recan, 45, Newberry, South Carolina, and denied any part in the beating and robbery.

A partial refund was secured for Miller on the two Pittsburgh bus tickets bought by Brezak and Korey for the trip that ended when motor police arrested them at Chambersburg. About $12 was spent for bus tickets and more than $32 was recovered from the prisoners. Brezak and Pitts removed Miller's shoes and stockings after the beating as they completed their search for money on his person, police stated.

Pitts has served terms in state penitentiaries in the south, police say, and Brezak also admitted to a police record on larceny and vagrancy counts.

Miller's condition was reported as good at the hospital. He may be discharged late today.

Pastor Talkson 'Patriotism' At Annual O.I.A. Banquet

The annual banquet of the Battlefield council, No. 717, Order of Independent Americans, was held Friday evening in the lodge rooms on Baltimore street. The meal this year consisted of oysters prepared in all styles with accompanying delicacies. Serving began at 5 o'clock and by 8:30 o'clock a total of 250 persons had dined.

Departing from the usual custom of an elaborate program of entertainment following the meal, John E. McDonnell, one of the older members of the order, introduced the Rev. Paul Beard, pastor of Mt. Joy Lutheran church, who gave the address.

In his opening remarks, the Rev. Mr. Beard pointed out that he was "pinch hitting" for the Rev. George H. Berkeimer, Arendtsville, who spoke to the members of the order in Flohr's Lutheran church last Sunday evening but was unable to be present at Friday's meeting. The Mt. Joy pastor spoke primarily of "Patriotism" and compared conditions existing in America with those in other parts of the world, citing incentives for patriotism here. He stated that while aliens coming to our shores to make their homes develop a love of country, it is not the inherent patriotism of the native born and predicted that in the future we will see the effects of the adoption of foreign-born citizens.

The speaker stated that patriotism should not be external, but in the heart. He cited an instance that occurred during one of his former pastorates in New York when he attended a meeting of a German society where it was boasted that all the refreshments for the affair came from their homeland, illustrating the speaker's contention that while they were American citizens their love was all for Germany.

The committee in charge of the affair comprised Charles S. Black, chairman; Robert Lohr, Charles C. Harner, James Logan and Raymond C. Little.

LEGION AIMS TO ENROLL 75,000

Long automobile "caravans" took hundreds of American Legionnaires from the far corners of the state to Harrisburg today with reports which state leaders believe would indicate realization of the Legion's goal of 75,000 members by next summer. Gettysburg's post was represented.

Membership was the prime purpose of the annual state "round-up" in the granite, golden-domed capitol, but delegates took the occasion to consider and act upon other subjects.

A pre-roundup executive session of the hospitalization committee in State Treasurer F. Clair Ross' office resulted in a decision to check up with the national hospital board on the lack of a 750-bed veterans' hospital in Pennsylvania.

FOES IN SENATE SPEAK AGAINST BUREAU CHANGES

Washington, Dec. 10 (AP)—Some of the senators who opposed the administration's re-organization bill in the last congress predicted today the defeat of any new proposal to give President Roosevelt a free hand to reshuffle federal bureaus.

The President told a press conference Friday he would recommend to the new congress enactment of a re-organization bill, but said he had no idea whether there would be any fundamental changes from the measure which evoked a heated controversy last session.

In that connection Mr. Roosevelt commented that everyone agrees the government's administrative machinery should be made more efficient.

Senator McNary (R-Ore.), the minority leader echoed this view, but added:

"Everyone is for re-organization if it will promote the efficiency of government and reduce the cost thereof. Everyone is willing to give a President power to abolish offices and bureaus and transfer and amalgamate the functions of bureaus."

"But in my opinion the majority of congress wants to have some control over arbitrary decisions by the President."

McNary told reporters that the re-organization program could not be enacted without an amendment giving congress the veto power over presidential orders revamping the administrative setup.

On the administration side of the argument, Senator Norris (Ind-Neb.), asserted it would be a "futile" re-organization bill which gave congress the power to review presidential decisions."

"In reshaping the bureaus," Norris said, "the President will have to step on a lot of toes. He will have to step on the bureaus themselves and on the members of congress who have pet bureaus."

"If congress is given the power to veto his actions, it will be just like a log-rolling rivers and harbors bill. One member would have a pet here, another there and a third there. Nothing would ever be accomplished."

"We have to delegate the authority to someone, and I can't see who else it could be besides the President."

It was the first such compensation, the firm stated, for any of the 20,000,000 destroyed during the last 60 years by folks who pegged rocks and fired bullets at those glass caps on the yard arms of wire poles.

The September grand jury several times assembled and then sent home because court moves blocked action, received notice to meet in Dauphin county's old courthouse at 10 a. m. Thursday "to investigate and to inquire into such matters as shall be submitted to them by the court."

The original grand jury panel included 13 republicans and 11 democrats.

8 COACHES OF TRAIN DERAILED

Defiance, O., Dec. 10 (AP)—The Baltimore and Ohio railroad's east-bound Fort Pitt limited left the rails near here early today, causing injuries to two women sufficiently serious to require hospital treatment.

Many other passengers were treated for minor cuts and bruises at the scene of the accident near Holgate, 10 miles east of here.

The women were brought to a Defiance hospital by ambulance. Attendants said their condition was not serious.

R. M. Shaw, who drove the ambulance to the wreck reported eight of the train's 10 coaches were derailed. Some of these, he said, plunged deep into mud at the base of embankments.

Secret Service Warns Merchants Of Spurious Notes

Due to the increase in the circulation of counterfeit notes during the holiday season, the United States Secret Service today warned retail merchants to examine carefully all bills, especially those presented by strangers making small purchases.

Employees in the Secret Service have pointed out that crowded stores with busy clerks and small stores are favorite spots for the passing of spurious notes.

The following counterfeit notes are those in most active circulation in this blue area at the present time:

A $5 blue seal note with check letters and numbers: A 81, A 513 or E 621.

A $5 red seal note with check letters and numbers H 204, I 204 or L 239.

A $10 green seal note with check letters and numbers L 8 or I 18.

A $10 blue seal note with check letters and numbers D 44 or P 4.

The Secret Service has suggested the following procedure when a counterfeit note is found:

1. Do not return it to the passer.

2. Notify the police or Secret Service at once.

3. Delay the passer under a pretext until officers arrive.

4. Avoid argument with passer; if necessary, tell him the proper authorities will handle the matter.

5. Write down a description if passer leaves before officers arrive.

6. Take the license numbers of any cars involved.

Fractionally down were Western Union, Bethlehem and Westinghouse.

COUNTRIES OF HEMISPHERE TO CO-OPERATE

Lima, Peru, Dec. 10 (AP)—The pan-American conference looked to Secretary Cordell Hull and the foreign ministers of Argentina and Peru today for keynote speeches charting a course for the 21 republics of the western hemisphere.

Delegates thronging this hill-rimmed Peruvian capital evinced keen interest in the three speeches, scheduled for a late afternoon session, which were expected not only to call for closer pan-American co-operation but perhaps to indicate how far their respective governments were willing to go in that direction.

With Secretary Hull on the second day's conference program were Foreign Minister Jose Maria Cantillo of Argentina and Dr. Carlos Concha, foreign minister of Peru.

Peru's dynamic president, Oscar Benavides, opened the conference amid colorful pageantry Friday with the assertion that the western hemisphere "wishes to be strong in order to be respected."

Though stressing the community of ideals and interests that link American nations, Benavides was careful to say such unity did not cut the western hemisphere off from the rest of the world.

Assistant Secretary of State Adolf A. Berle, Jr., told a radio audience that the United States was not seeking military alliances with the Latin American republics.

Such a course was "obviously out of the question," Berle asserted, denying rumors he said were current.

Among delegates, however, there were indications an outright declaration for mutual assistance in case of foreign aggression might be made by the conference.

Now that the Cuban and Argentine delegations have broken the ground by submitting projects for consideration, the first condemning racial persecution and the second advocating regular meetings among the American foreign ministers for mutual consultation, it was expected the various delegations would come forward with other proposals.

DALADIER WINS POLICY SUPPORT

From the more moderate tone of anti-French articles in the fascist press and the absence of new street demonstrations Italy's unofficial campaign for her "aspirations" in Tunisia seemed to be slackening.

Anti-Italian demonstrations, however, spread westward from Tunisia to Algeria in France's Arab empire as French troops strengthened their guard on the Tunisian frontier facing Italian Libya.

Huge illustrated posters appeared on Nazi precinct headquarters in Berlin depicting British soldiers firing on Arabs and destroying Arab villages and complaining:

"World conscience is asleep when England's soldiers mow down Arabs with their guns, but it is awake when a few windows of Jewish junk shops and synagogues are smashed in Germany."

In Spain, where warfronts have been silent for more than a week, both sides apparently were preparing new offensives—the insurgents in the northeast and the government in south and central Spain.

Chinese resistance against a Japanese drive in Hunan province, strengthening notably in a week's fighting, continued. A fleet of 20 Japanese motor launches, however, penetrated Lake Tungting, China's largest, for the first time and attempted to make a landing at Lukiohsh, 20 miles south of Yochow.

KENNEDY URGES HITLER TO HELP WITH REFUGEES

Southampton, Dec. 10 (AP)—United States Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy said today the major need in solving Europe's refugee problem was "co-operation for an international loan and above all a little co-operation from Hitler."

"You can stop worrying about where to put the refugees now," he said. "That problem will be solved." Kennedy discussed the refugee problem along with the war debts and debentures before sailing on the liner Queen Mary for the United States.

About war debts he said: "I think we can probably make a deal with Great Britain about war debts, but I am afraid it will have to be a deal that public opinion in the United States is not prepared to accept."

"Britain is not prepared to pay the whole debt and many people at home are against anything but a 100 cents on the dollar settlement."

He said he had never discussed the question officially "with any member of the British government for the simple reason that I had no instructions to do so."

About debentures: "We are going to limit the number of Americans presented at court even more next year than this year. Only those Americans who live over here will be considered."

ARENDSVILLE WINS OPENERS

The Arendtsville vocational school basketball teams won their opening games Friday evening by defeating Boiling Springs at Boiling Springs in a pair of close games. Coach Smith's boys won 22-20 while the girls triumphed 23-19.

The boys' game was a thriller throughout with neither team leading by more than four points. Boiling Springs led 10-7 at half time but Arendtsville rallied in the last two periods to eke out a victory. Bushey and Kane carried the brunt of the attack for Arendtsville while Coyle and Danley starred for the losers.

A big first quarter which enabled the Arendtsville girls to pile up a 12-6 lead gave the upper countians a 23-19 decision in the preliminary tussle. At half time the score was 15-10. Wilson and Breneman led the offense for their respective teams.

On Tuesday the Arendtsville teams will play at Lemasters.

FAIRFIELD HI DROPS 2 TILTS

Fairfield high opened its basketball season Friday evening by dropping a pair of games at Washington Township. The boys lost a hard fought game, 15-12, while the girls dropped a 25-4 decision. A third game played between the reserve boys' teams was allowed to stand as a 12-12 time at the close of the regulation period.

Coach Slaybaugh's boys put up a brilliant battle in the main event and led throughout the first half which ended 8-6. The teams were deadlocked 11-11 at the close of the third period but Washington Township spurred in the final period to win out. B. Neely and Hoffman played good offensive games.

Although defeated the Fairfield girls showed great improvement against a veteran Washington Township sextet. The victors piled up a 13-0 lead in the first half to win handily. Rohrbach, Royer, Kane and McCans played nice games.

Next Friday Fairfield will play the alumni.

6-MAN FOOTBALL DEMONSTRATED

Harrisburg, Dec. 10 (AP)—Six-man football, with three players on the line and three in the backfield, was demonstrated to coaches and physical education directors in convention here by 12 members of the football squad from a capital city suburb.

Coach Fred Graham, of nearby Camp Hill high, staged a game, some of it in "slow motion," to show delegates to the 17th annual convention of the Pennsylvania State Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation how it was played.

Graham explained six-man football, used principally in the mid-west and western schools, was advantageous where the game with 11 men is barred or where squads are limited.

How the game differs from the conventional gridiron contest: On a running play the ball must be passed backward to the carrier.

Forward passes are barred, except behind the line of scrimmage; only the lateral is permitted beyond the line.

Fifteen yards, instead of ten must be made in four downs.

All six players are eligible for a pass.

Defense formations applicable are 3-2-1, 2-1-2-1, 4-2, or 4-1-1. Players on the offense may spread across the field if desired.

In all other respects the game is like the 11-man tussle. Tackling and blocking, kicking and punting rules are the same, Graham said.

The football demonstration was one of dozens put on for the 300 delegates Friday. Debates and discussions took up the first day.

Fever is a symptom, not a disease.

The Open Road

"UNCLE Dan'l Crumms burst in to the offices of The Gettysburg Times in his usual shuffle, peeled down to the third sweater, and delivered himself of a dictum. 'Hunters,' said Uncle Dan'l, 'Hunters ain't fair to Paul Bunyan!'"

We inquired in what manner they had run afoul of the rights of the logging king, and looked hopefully for the nearest exit.

"Because they ain't," sputtered Dan'l, "Here hunters go and get their pockets shot off, another hunter puts a blanket over the radiator o' his auto in the mornin', then comes back in the evenin', sees the blanket wavin' an' puts a shot through the radiator thinkin' it's a deer. 'T ain't fair, b'cracky."

"An' ifn thet ain't enough, th' papers say that sekatory Boardman is pleadin' with the automobile drivers to 'come in an' get tagged, ifn they wanta drive next year. Dern silly, seems t'me, ifn th' people and the sekatory o' highways got nothin' to do beside play kid games. 'Tain't fair to Paul.'" Here Dan'l lapsed into a moody silence.

Finally the old man recovered his composure. He brightened considerably, then started:

"Thar war one time me an' Paul war huntin' thet I remember ez bein' ez strange ez any tale brought outa South Mountain this year. The only trouble war, thet thet huntin' o' Paul's and me war later to bring us great sorrow, th' greatest sorrow thet ever filled our lives."

"Ya see, Paul an' me war invited by Chief Sittin' Bull, an' his boys, Standin' an' Lyin', to go along with the whole tribe a huntin' buffalo out on the Great Plains. Wal Me an' Paul decides to hev some fun with the Injuns, so we takes guns along for the fellows to use."

"An' Twar those guns thet made us so powerful sad later on. 'The injuns see th' buffalo a runnin' an' they start blazin' away at 'em. An' they keep pullin' the triggers like mad, an' there ain't no sound o' no shootin'. When me an' Paul sees this we like to busts laughin'. Then when we explain to th' Injuns thet we hed given 'em thirty yar guns, they just looked sheepish, an' threw 'em down. Then they went home, an' got other guns and we started huntin' right."

We inquired casually: "And what might be thirty-year guns, Dan'l?"

"Thirty yar guns, is guns thet don't go off until thirty yars after you pull the trigger. 'An' thet war what made us so sorrowful later on."

"What happened?" we inquired. "Wal," Said Dan'l "thirty yars later to the minute Colonel Custer led his men up to see Sittin' Bull an' he went right by thet place whar we was a shootin' jest thirty yar to the second after we'd finished huntin'. An' ye know whet happened to him."

We see by the papers, that the wily Japanese, who need all of their metal to convert the heathen Chinese, are making bicycles out of paper. They probably use a Sunday edition of some of the metropolitan papers.

FREE of charge, we offer Irving Mirisch, Gettysburg's theatre manager, a suggestion. Out in Chicago one of the theatres is showing great profits from a "crazy auction," in which an auction is held from the stage of about twelve articles. If the successful bidder goes higher than the wholesale price he must do some silly stunt suggested by the manager before he is refunded the difference between the two prices. When everything is auctioned off the manager offers to buy silly things from the audience. For example, a stick of well chewed gum, a plug of tobacco, or a toothpick. First on the stage with the requested object is paid a dollar for it. It seems to be great fun. We offer this suggestion free, but with one string attached. We do wish Irv wouldn't pick the times when we can't see them to show the pictures we want to see.

UNCLE Dan'l has a little story on hunting that we'd like to pass on to the folks who neglect the good things of life to read this column. "Me an' Paul was a huntin' one cold day," says Dan'l, "when it got so cold th' bullets froze in the barrel and we couldn't get 'em out no how. So Paul says to me, he says, 'Dan'l I got an idea!' So he goes an' gets a real strong light an' says, 'we're going' rabbit huntin'. Wal we does. Paul turns the light into the rabbits' eyes, 'en it makes the rabbits' eyes water. Wal, ye know, thet water flows down from thar eyes to the ground an' freezes solid. Then all we have to do is go out and pick up the rabbits, helpless thar fast on thet pillar o' ice."

THE Open Road was interested in a little conversation it had with "Happy" Over the other day. "Happy" was explaining about batteries at his emporium on Carlisle street, and the explanation went something like this: "No wonder people have trouble with their batteries in winter. Do you know that a storage battery in good condition is 100 per cent efficient when the temperature is above 80, and only 42 per cent efficient at zero?"

The action inside the battery cell is chemical, with the acid acting on and through the plates. Now when it becomes colder, the plate materials contract and the pores become smaller. At the same time the acid becomes heavier and thicker as the temperature drops lower. So it has trouble in getting through the pores and working. That's why people have trouble in winter.

Now a battery that was only half charged would work all right in summer, but in winter its power has dropped to practically nothing. Add to that the fact that cold engines are hard to start, and a battery only half efficient won't work."

"Happy" suggests that drivers have their batteries checked every two weeks in winter. Then if they start to go bad they can be caught in time.

"What happened?" we inquired. "Wal," Said Dan'l "thirty yars later to the minute Colonel Custer led his men up to see Sittin' Bull an' he went right by thet place whar we was a shootin' jest thirty yar to the second after we'd finished huntin'. An' ye know whet happened to him."

We see by the papers, that the wily Japanese, who need all of their metal to convert the heathen Chinese, are making bicycles out of paper. They probably use a Sunday edition of some of the metropolitan papers.

Mother, Son Sentenced In Hit and Run Death

Greensburg, Pa., Dec. 10 (AP)—The hit-run automobile death of 13-year-old Wilmer Wray sent a mother and son to the workhouse and reformatory today for what Judge Richard D. Laird termed a "heartless and cruel offense."

Mrs. Jeannette Whitzel, of Lower Burrell township, Westmoreland county, was sentenced to a three-year-term in the Allegheny county workhouse and her 19-year-old son, Clyde, the driver of the auto, was sentenced to Huntingdon reformatory.

Young Wray was killed as he pedaled his bicycle along a highway in Lower Burrell township near his home last October 15. The state charged the mother urged her son to drive away.

THE REINDEER EXPRESS

SANTA was wearing a belt around his coat that had jingling bells on it, and there were two little bells attached to the top of his long stocking cap.They reached the reindeer in a short time, although it was all Willy Nilly could do to keep up with Santa Claus."I think there is enough snow now for you to drive the sleigh right back to your house," said Santa, and Willy Nilly nodded, for he was too much out of breath to speak.The reindeer were waiting. There were sixteen of them, and now Santa got in one sleigh with eight reindeer harnessed in front, and Willy Nilly got in the other.The Puddle Muddlers heard them coming and dashed out to meet them."Now," said Santa Claus, "I'll leave one sleigh here and the reindeer can make themselves at home.
They like to be out-of-doors, you know.""But if they want shelter they can go to my shed," Willy Nilly offered. "You needn't mind leaving the sleigh anywhere. We don't have much traffic around Puddle Muddle.""Yes, you could leave it right out in the middle of one of our snowy roads and it wouldn't be in the way," added Top Notch.Now Santa Claus got in a plane and flew off and Willy Nilly asked the Puddle Muddlers to decide which one of them would take the first ride."It's so hard to make up my lambish mind," bleated Sweet Face.
"I'd like to be the first, and then again I'd like to have the treat to look forward to as the saying is.""That's the way I feel about it," quacked Mrs. Quacko.
"We'll draw for it," said Willy Nilly. "The one with the shortest piece of paper goes first," he said.

Today's Talk

THE SCATTERED GONE

REINCARNATION has always been an interesting topic to me. There have been so many discoveries and revelations, since I became a human being in this world, that I think any of us may be permitted to speculate upon any topic, or possibility, to our heart's content.One thing I do feel, and that is that a great personage never quite dies out of this world. Something of infinite beauty and grandeur remains, after the moving spirit is gone. All over the world, throughout all history, the scattered gone still live, I believe, in some form or other.
Not visibly, but in some spiritually imbedded form. Every day we meet some one who reminds us of some one we have known or loved.We ourselves may carry about with us the characteristics of scores of those whom we have known or trusted, or whose personalities have left an imprint upon our consciousness. Even as the body absorbs the Sun, and in turn enriches and gives to it new vitality, so do lives we have contacted give a healthy tan to our souls, leaving something permanent to us as their contribution to our happiness.We probably carry about within us the influence of thousands of people, who have crossed our path. It is impossible for me to pick out from my book shelves, a single book without feeling that the spirit of that author lives and breathes again as I scan the pages once written. He, or she, appears in the very room in which I sit and read! A silent presence perhaps smiles in appreciation.The walls of my library are covered with works of art that I have lovingly gathered over the years. But there is but one, among the many, who still lives in bodily form. All the others belong to the scattered gone.
To me, however, they are all vitally alive, for each has touched that which touches me in my mind and feeling heart.What a happy thought, at least, to think that we may be privileged to live indefinitely in innumerable lives, long after we have retired for our last, long sleep.

The Army Post Murders

By Virginia Hanson

The Characters

Katherine Cornish, myself visiting Elizabeth on a mid-western Army post.Elizabeth, Colonel Wright's daughter.
Adam Drew, acting commanding officer.Yesterday: Charlie's gun is taken from my suitcase.

Chapter 32

Just A Chance

LOOK, Adam. I've been thinking about that notebook and the two attacks on Barney and the possibility that the shot that killed Anne might have been intended for him. And the repeated threat of—of the family skeleton in what he wrote about everyone.
And I can see only one explanation that fits it all—and that's blackmail.In silence Adam digested that unpalatable word. Then he shook his head."A blackmailer is a peculiarly nasty vermin. I won't believe it of a brother officer. I have my own curiosity about people, but I don't trade on it. I prefer to think Barney is that way.""Then why the notebook?" I asked. "And what was he doing with it tonight?""What do Elizabeth and Anne know about Anne that they aren't telling?" he countered. "And what was that poor devil of a sentry trying to tell me? And what about those stones?"His voice trailed off and he stared straight through me, his eyes the unearthly, dazzling blue of the sparks thrown off by an acetylene torch."What is it?" I cried, my pulses beginning to pound.He shook his head as if I were a buzzing fly."I've got to think," he muttered.
I let him think. Presently he seized the brown notebook, leafed through it, found something and grew more excited as he read. He leaped to his feet and raced around the small room while I watched him in painful suspense."But how can I prove it?" he demanded of me suddenly; but when I snatched at the chance to ply him with questions his only answer was a vacant stare."I'm only trying to help you," I cried at last in exasperation."Eh? Oh, yes, yes! Thank you very much."He was the soul of courtesy, but he was gone from me. I retired into a sulky silence and tried to figure it out for myself.I was getting exactly nowhere when the telephone rang. It started Adam out of his somnambulism, but he was so long coming back to reality that it rang a second time before he remembered to answer it."Yes. . . . Yes. . . . A long pause.
"Are you sure that's all she said?
All right, Doc, I'll be right over."He listened a moment longer, cradled the instrument carefully.
"Is there an extension telephone in this house?"I nodded.
"Where?""Upstairs hall. Not far from my room. Why?""Someone was listening in on that conversation. I heard the click. . . ."

'Touch And Go'

He released the telephone again,
quietly, and asked for the Officers' Club."Charlie? Adam speaking. Is Barney asleep? . . . You're sure he's all right then? . . . Very well, I want you two to meet me at the hospital in ten minutes. . . . I don't care whose car you take, but your orders are the same as before—you're to stay with Barney every minute. I don't want any more of these mysterious attacks. I'm holding you personally responsible for him. . . . Ten minutes then."He put the instrument back, shoved it away from him.

"What has happened?"
"Anne is conscious, asking for Barney. Want to come along?"Adam shrugged. "She may be delirious—she may lapse and never come out of it. It's touch and go. Doc says they have her in an oxygen tent."He motioned me to silence, and together we tiptoed out into the hall.The upper landing was lighted and Elizabeth was standing there, fully dressed, gazing down at us."It's Anne!" she said accusingly.
"Why wasn't I told?"Adam said, "Sorry, explain later.""Annie and I are coming," she stated and was answered by a wail from the shadows."Me too!" said Lou Orpington's voice. "Wait for me!"Adam hurried me out of the house.Doc Moore, his hair mussed and new lines in his face, stood in the door of the waiting room."She's got a wonderful constitution," he said. "Wonderful. There's a chance—just a chance. . . ."

"Her mother and father here?"

"Yes, been here for hours, waiting. When she finally opened her eyes I called them. I think she recognized them, but she kept whispering, 'Barney.' There may be something she doesn't want them to know. The old lady went to pieces—had to give her a sedative, put her in one of the other beds."

"Anne still conscious?"

"Pitifully. She dozes, wakes, asks for Barney."He turned, looked down the hall.
"Here they come. I'll see if she's awake."He was gone, with light, noiseless steps.Barney and Charlie came in, ignoring me, fastening their gaze on Adam. They were hollow eyed, unshaven, but they had taken time to don day uniforms. They were in olive-drab slacks, fresh khaki shirts, and they carried their campaign hats."What's happened?" asked Barney evenly. Except for an unhealthy pallor he seemed to have recovered from his mysterious attack."Anne is alive—she's been asking for you," Adam said gently.

Dazed Eyes

I heard the faint whistle of Charlie's indrawn breath. I saw Barney's sudden rigidity, the quiver of emotion on his face that for a moment broke up his iron control."Where is she?" he asked in a high unnatural voice. He turned, was on his way."Just a minute—Doc will let you know. She may be asleep. You'd better wait here."Barney stumbled back into the room."Why wasn't I told of this before?" His dazed eyes were fixed on Adam."The chance was too slim. I thought you'd rather not be kept in suspense."Charlie broke in eagerly. "Then
—then she's going to get well?"He was trembling uncontrollably, and he did not seem to know that I was there."It's still in the lap of the gods," said Adam.Suddenly they were all there—Annie with her hair in wisps under the belligerent black affair, Lou Orpington with excited eyes darting from face to face, Elizabeth calm, contained, radiating strength.She went at once to Barney, put her hand on his arm, murmured that she was glad; but I thought he scarcely heard her.And then my eyes leaped to the doorway again and I wondered if the strain had been too much for me. Was I imagining things, or did I really see Mrs. Flower?

She came at once to me and I saw that her husband was behind her."It's Anne, isn't it?" she asked brightly, cheerfully, in that nerve-shattered room. "I just told Flower that's what it was. You see, there weren't any lights at the Carew's, and the doctor being gone all evening and all, and cars coming and going all the time—you can see the hospital from our quarters. So I just told Flower. 'Anne's alive,' and we came to see if I was right—

and to see if we can do anything, of course."She smiled confidently. "You see, Gilly woke up when we came in,
and it's so near morning of course he wouldn't be able to sleep any more, so Flower and I didn't bother to go to bed. For while Gilly always very good with Nurse, he's always very full of spirits in the morning, and evenif one could, I don't believe in suppressing a child."I said, "Oh!" rather inadequately.
Then, to my surprise, Adam took her off my hands.He drew her into a corner, spoke a few words unobtrusively and drifted away. I was beginning to feel that he had withdrawn his confidence from me when he paused beside me."Keep your eye on Annie," he said in a voice that was little more than a breath.I must have shown that I was startled, for before I could frame a question he answered it."Nothing is going to happen if I can prevent it, but I can't take any chances. If—If Anne knows anything there may be an attempt to silence her—the murderer may show a hand. . . ."

Backgrounds of Adams County

By B. F. MACPHERSON

No. 68 — A Few Notes

ACCORDING to our records we have given brief sketches of all the Revolutionary soldiers buried in Black's graveyard with the exception of John Hasack (1733-1789), James McAllister (1737-1782), and Joshua Russell (1733-1805). Thus far we have been unable to secure the necessary data regarding these men.
By this we do not mean that they have given up the quest, it simply means that thus far our search has been unsuccessful. We will give this material just as soon as possible.The next cemetery on our list is Lower Marsh Creek. The probable Revolutionary soldiers buried there follows: Lieutenant Colonel James Agnew (1740-1825), David Agnew (1741-1797), David Agnew (1741-1795), David Blythe (1740-1831),
Clayton Chamberlain (1760-1819),
Robert Cunningham (1741-1823),
Col. Matthew Dill (1726-1812),
George Kerr (1831-1815), Samuel
Knox (1726-1808), James Marshall (1729-1805), John Morrow (1733-1811), John McElroy (1755-1844), Joseph McClean (1752-1776), Captain William McClean (1733-1807), Benjamin Reed (1744-1828), Captain James Scott (1760-1806—served under Major Hugh Scott), Abraham Scott (1757-1834), James Thompson (1742-1801), Thomas White, Sr. (1746-
1838), Captain David Wilson (1751-1846), Andrew Hart (1747-1792), and John Irvin (1751-1822).It is our intention to begin our survey in this cemetery next week.
If any of our readers could give any data it would be greatly appreciated.IN Volume 4, 5th Series we find the following list of Revolutionary soldiers, living in Adams county, who received pensions in 1814:1. John Allison, Huntingdon, township, served as sergeant major in the 4th regiment, Pennsylvania continental line, commanded by Lt.
Col. William Butler.2. Thomas Heffernan, school teacher in Abbotstown, enlisted 1776 with Lieutenant Reid, Captain Church's company, Pennsylvania line. Still living in 1814.

3. Jacob Myers.

4. John McGinnis, Menallen township, from age of seven to 21 years with John Bill, enlisted 1776 and remained in service until the close of the war. In 1814, aged 71 years of age.5. In the Fall of 1775 David Solt enlisted with Lieutenant Craig in the 5th regiment commanded by General Anthony Wayne. Served in the army nearly four years.6. Jacob Weaver, Germany township, enlisted 1775 under Captain Folbert, 7th regiment, then commanded by Colonel Irwin, afterwards commanded by Colonel Hays. Was in wagon and foot departments.
During revolt in the Jerseys was transferred to the 4th regiment, commanded by Colonel Richard Butler, and remained in the same under Captain Andrew Irwin until October 15, 1782. Obtained discharge from Colonel Richard Butler at Carlisle.The following data regarding a soldier of the Revolution who lived in and enlisted from that part of York county was given to us a short time ago, Lieutenant John Range is not buried in his home county, but we feel that the sketch of his life will be of interest to our readers.Lieutenant John Range was born in York county in 1746. He enlisted April 5, 1778 as first lieutenant in 5th company, 4th battalion of York county militia."For valiant services in the Revolutionary War" he was granted a tract of land in Forest county (then part of Venango). He went to that place in 1800 for permanent settlement.Lieutenant Range was married, after the war, to Mandolin Shallas, who lived near New Oxford, Pennsylvania. Their children were as follows: Elizabeth Range intermarried with Jacob Hunter, John Range, Jr., Shallas Range, Mary
Range inter-married with William Gilbrath, Susan Range intermarried with John Gallagher, Ann Range inter-married with John Begorts, and James Range.Lieutenant Range died in 1826 and was buried in Riverside cemetery, Tionesta, Forest county, Pennsylvania. His will was registered May 12, 1827 and in it he providesfor his wife as follows: "To my loving and affectionate wife, Martha Range, my bed and bed clothes and three trunks with the clothes and other articles in them; also $200 in money; also the book called 'Confession of Faith'; also my large Bible, and she is to have a decent maintenance out of my estate."We are indebted to a local historian for the above data.IN writing this series of sketches on the Revolutionary soldiers buried in the county, we cannot hope to make each and very sketch absolutely complete. Sometimes the wife's "maiden name" is not known, another time the date of marriage will be unknown. So many records have been destroyed or lost, so many graves were never marked, that the task to which we have set ourselves is almost impossible. We ask you to be patient, and we will do our best.

DEMOCRACY IS CHALLENGED, DECLARES EDEN

New York, Dec. 10 (AP).—Anthony Eden, trim former foreign secretary of Great Britain, spoke out emphatically Friday night for the preservation of the democracy which "we in England and you in America cherish most," and saw as the greatest threat to that democracy "a new form of idolatry, the worship of the state."

Eden's address to the National Association of Manufacturers was a ringing defense of democracy as "a university in which we learn from one another. It can never be a barracks where blind obedience is the first essential."

"It would indeed be the greatest irony in human history," he told the 4,000 persons at the banquet and a nation-wide radio audience, "if mankind were to allow all progress to be stifled by the setting up" of this "worship of the state to which all men must bow down, and to which they must sacrifice their freedom of faith, of speech, of worship."

"Man was not, in our view, made for the state. The state was made for man," he said.

The British statesman, who resigned his cabinet post in a difference of opinion with Prime Minister Chamberlain over policies toward dictators stressed that Great Britain and the United States must stand firm together against the enemies of democracy and "we are acutely conscious of the need to defend ourselves."

Describing himself as "an average Englishman here only on a friendly visit and in no wise official," Eden said "we must be constantly re-examining our political faith and applying it to the conditions of the modern world.

"Every political system, be it democratic or autocratic, must continually evolve, and in the last resource the survival of democracy must depend upon the faith which it inspires, and the results which, through faith, it can achieve."

"Democracy must have the strength of the best tempered steel, not rigid, but supple," he added. "It must have the strength of the highest form of discipline—self discipline"

AMUSEMENTS: HERE AND THERE

HERE ARE NEXT WEEK'S PICTURES AT THE MAJESTIC
Monday and Tuesday—"HARD TO GET"
Wednesday—"LISTEN, DARLING"
Thursday—"SONS OF THE LEGION"
Friday and Saturday—"ANGELS WITH DIRTY FACES" ("Listen, Darling" and "Sons of the Legion" are movie quiz films)

OLIVIA de HAVILLAND drives her light roadster into Dick Powell's combination auto-court-service station. This scene is in the comedy "Hard to Get."

While Allen Jenkins fills the gasoline tank, Dick busies himself with oil, water and windshield.

Midway through the scene, however, Cameraman Charles Rosher breaks it up. There's a bad reflection in the windshield and the glass will have to be removed, he explains.

After the windshield is taken out the scene is repeated. While Powell wipes the imaginary windshield, Miss de Havilland gets out of the car. She stands alongside it, leaning against the door.

This time Director Ray Enright stops the scene.

"You got your arm through the windshield, Olivia," he remarks. And sure enough, the actress has unconsciously looped her elbow around the upright, right through the place that ordinarily would be filled with glass.

Paul Muni and Luise Rainer will return to Gettysburg on the Strand screen next Tuesday in "The Good Earth."

"LISTEN DARLING" shows that Freddie Bartholomew, too, can grow up gracefully. He and Judy Garland kidnap Judy's mamma, Mary Astor, to keep her from marrying Mr. Drubs. Mamma, financially harassed and ready to marry anybody who'd take care of Judy and her other child, Scotty Beckett, is just as happy to be kidnapped—especially after she meets Walter Pidgeon.

Freddie is a comedy sock as a serious romance-promoter, with Pidgeon and Alan Hale as his prey. The Beckett youngster is brattishly cute, and Judy sings a lot. "Listen, Darling" is so full of human stuff and brightness that it's tonic for that tired feeling.

Horsehair, used in clothes and upholstery at the turn of the century, is used for hats and other items of Claudette Colbert's wardrobe in Paramount's "Zaza." She plays a music hall favorite of that period, wearing authentic costumes.

THE CHRISTMAS spirit has pervaded the lobby of the Majestic theatre where a miniature Santa Claus stands in a corner and answers the questions of the boys and girls who crowd around him.

On one night this week a little boy revealed a question that probably has been troubling him some time. It happened this way:

A group of youngsters was gathered around the "talking Santa" just before the end of the first evening show at the theatre. As soon as the show ended they all scampered out of the lobby except one little dirty-faced lad who remained to gaze thoughtfully at the red-coated figure.

Then, while he was the only youngster there, he said in a strong voice: "You still haven't told me why you took my sled away."

After that he ran out to the street to join his playmates without waiting for an answer from "Santa," who probably was caught without words anyway.

Marie Wilson is the first star to have her face engraved on a postage stamp. It's the stamp of a mythical kingdom called Nutland, and a hobbyist who does fine engraving made it.

ALTHOUGH Donald O'Connor has only appeared in two motion pictures during his entire screen career, he plays the leading role in the new American youth drama, "Sons of the Legion."

The boy star who startled audiences everywhere when he acted, sang, danced, played an accordion and rode a race-horse in the recent Bing Crosby-Fred MacMurray comedy, "Sing You Sinners," confines himself to acting in "Sons of the Legion," a moving story about an underprivileged boy who finds a new life when "folks on the other side of the railroad tracks" take an interest in him and teach him the meaning of Americanism.

In "Sons of the Legion," O'Connor plays in a cast which includes some of the most popular juveniles in filmdom. Among them are Billy Lee, who scored with Fred MacMurray in "Cocoanut Grove," Billy Cook and Benny Bartlett. In the "grown-up" wing of the cast are Lynne Overman, Elizabeth Patterson, Evelyn Keyes and William Frawley.

John Littel used motorized roller skates that boast small one cylinder engines. Foot pressure controls the speed.

"JIMMY plays too rough. Or perhaps I should say in more many vernacular, Cagney can't pull his punches." So testified Pat O'Brien. The two were playing a scene for "Angels With Dirty Faces," the Warner film, when O'Brien sustained bruised knees and elbows and a general shaking up.

The two stars were making a sequence in an alleyway between two buildings on a street set. Cagney, who plays a gangster, is supposedly trapped in a furniture warehouse. Scores of policemen are trying to smoke him out with tear gas. O'Brien, who plays a priest, goes in to persuade him to come out. Cagney agrees, then sticks two guns in O'Brien's back and uses him as a shield, and when he reaches the street he knocks O'Brien down and runs for it.

The first time, Cagney didn't push O'Brien hard enough.

Once again the two stars came out and this time Cagney gave O'Brien a terrific shove. O'Brien skidded along the pavement, and nursed bruises for some time.

The annual Majestic food show will be held on December 22 at 4 p. m. with the co-operation of the Mother's Club and the American Legion.

The bill-of-fare at the Majestic during the week of December 19 follows:

Monday and Tuesday—"Submarine Patrol," with Richard Greene and Nancy Kelly.

Wednesday—"Spring Madness," with Maureen O'Sullivan and Lew Ayres.

Thursday—"Swing That Cheer," with Tom Brown and Andy Devine.

Friday and Saturday—"Drums,"
